UCT investigating “UCT Exposed” blog and allegations

Please cite Ms Kylie Hatton, Deputy Director: Communication and Marketing Department, University of Cape Town

The University of Cape Town is investigating allegations that have been presented against a student, naming this student as the author of the “UCT Exposed” blog.

A full investigation is being undertaken as it is important to follow the correct process in this matter. UCT views this matter in an extremely serious light and condemns cyberbullying.

Meanwhile, the university has offered support to students affected by the “UCT Exposed” blog. The same support and counselling services are available to all other students and staff members.
