From Cape Town to Lagos and beyond at UCT Summer School

This year UCT Summer School is looking more deeply at our own city, country and continent, providing fresh perspectives on these places we call home.

Courses will help you to investigate every nook and cranny of the Cape – its rocks, its endurance races (the Argus Cycle Tour and the Two Oceans Marathon), its surfing culture, its Russian visitors, its newspaper history and its history of mental illness and shipwrecks.

Looking more broadly at South Africa and the continent as a whole, there are lectures on South African art, music and current affairs as well as on African literature, cities and unity movements. This is your chance to find out how African plants ended up in India and why Islam is such an important force in West Africa. We delve into the politics of place from Marikana to Bredasdorp and hear views on the 2016 municipal elections.

Questions that trouble us now as much as they have in the past will come in for probing: education, the arms deal, crime, policing, conservation and freedom of the press.

Featuring over thirty professors from UCT and around the world, Summer School 2016 has courses to interest every deep-thinking person. For more information, see the Summer School website.
